

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Money Week Houston Press Conference-- April 22, 2008

HOUSTON – (March 7, 2008) Money Week Houston Press Conference will be held at the Federal Reserve Bank on Tuesday, April 22, 2008. The conference will host Houston’s community leaders, business leaders, political dignitaries and financial institutes. Houston and surrounding cities will be informed and prepared for this national event brought to Houston for the first time, Money Week Houston – August 24-30, 2008.

Money Week Houston offers FREE classes and events that help consumers learn to manage their personal finances during the week of August 24 -30, 2008. Money Week Houston serves as a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) Alliance for Economic Inclusion with more the 250 financial education leaders across Houston, Texas and the Nation. It is designed to educate consumers about money management and generate awareness of financial education available on a wide range of topics such as saving, investing and using credit wisely.

Financial seminars, workshops, and activities will be hosted by representatives of local community groups, financial institutions, not-for-profit organizations, businesses, schools, libraries, government agencies and media outlets. Almost all of the activities are free and are being held at venues throughout the Houston and surrounding cities.

For more information about events slated for Money Week Houston or to take part please go to www.moneyweekhouston.org